GDPR Training

This EU GDPR Practitioner Conversion course is for individuals looking to upgrade their Foundation status to the more advanced and applicable Practitioner status. This 3-day EU General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) Practitioner Conversion Training Course educates candidates on how to adhere to the impending data protection law - assisting candidates to fully comprehend how to initiate, implement, and maintain an EU GDPR compliance programme. In addition, this EU GDPR Practitioner course allows candidates to meet the statutory role of a data protection officer under the EU GDPR guidance and learn how the new legislation will affect their business processes. The new requirements of individuals dealing with big data sets, mean that the role of a Data Protection Officer will transform into a specialist and sought after a career - hence this training course is essential for individuals looking to enhance their personal development and expand upon their current qualifications.

The EU GDPR is a singular data privacy law that European Union Countries will have to adhere to in an attempt to ameliorate the protection and decrease the risk of data breaches from cyber security attacks, including personal data. The EU GDPR will be fully operational on 25th May 2018, hence Data Protection Officers are required to develop their knowledge of the impending changes to their work role and business practices prior to this date, or face a substantial business fine. This Practitioner Course has dedicated professional practice modules that are intended to promote expert knowledge of initiating data organisation changes in accordance with the guidance listed in Article 39, including:

- Reminding employees of their obligation to adhere to the GDPR Law
- Monitoring compliance with the legislation
- Creating a privacy compliance framework
- The new role of a data protection officer
- Producing privacy impact statements
- Providing reports concerning advice on how to implement the required changes with minimal impact to business processes
- Cooperate with and act as a contact point between supervisory authority and the protection of personal data
- Data breach reporting
- GDPR Compensatory features

This certified EU GDPR Practitioner Training course will guide candidates through the responsibilities and actions expected of a Data Protection Officer - in order to provide a fundamental knowledge base concerning the new career role and task expectations listed in Article 39. Practical elements of the course will help candidates understand how to apply the best practices and methodologies to a case study scenario, to enhance the real-world applicability of acquired knowledge. This course is beneficial to businesses due to helping to avoid large non-compliance fines and legal pursuits, whilst encouraging customer satisfaction, safety beliefs, and better business management.
